OVERVIEW OF THE TOPIC

“Building effective team dynamics through conflict management and negotiation skills” emphasizes on creating productive, collaborative, and high-performing teams by managing disagreements constructively. In any workplace, conflicts naturally emerge due to differences in opinions, goals, personalities, nature, or resource constraints. When managed properly, conflict can enhance decision-making, innovation, and trust within teams. Negotiation skills enable individuals reach mutually acceptable solutions, ensuring fairness while preserving professional relationships. These capabilities are essential for leadership, emotional intelligence, and teamwork collaboration—key future skills identified for 2030.

Strengthening these abilities enables professionals to handle workplace challenges effectively and contribute positively to organizational growth and long-term success and achievement.

SCOPE OF THE PROJECT

1. Understanding Conflict and Team Dynamics

The project examines the nature, types, and causes of conflicts within teams and analyses how these conflicts influence collaboration, productivity, and overall team performance in professional environments.

2. Exploring Conflict Management and Negotiation Strategies

It studies structured conflict resolution approaches and negotiation techniques used in workplaces, including real-world insights gathered through qualitative interviews with professionals.

3. Linking Skills to Future Workplace Competencies

The project connects conflict management and negotiation skills to future-ready competencies identified by the World Economic Forum, emphasizing leadership, emotional intelligence, collaboration, and resilience

WORK BREAKDOWN STRUCTURE

TEAM PROFILE

Our team is made of five members, Samarth (ENFJ-T), Saksham (ENTJ), Vedant (ENFJ), Deebhika (ENFP), and Shravani (INFJ), who bring together a blend of, empathetic leadership, reflective analysis, strategic thinking and creativity. While each member has a distinct personality type and working preference/style, we all share a common commitment toward growth, collaboration, and meaningful contribution for the project submission.

Samarth and Vedant, both ENFJ personalities, naturally contribute strong interpersonal awareness and communication abilities within the team. Their ability to understand different perspectives and motivate other team members to strengthen team cohesion and makes discussions more inclusive. Saksham, as an ENTJ, introduces structure and goal orientation, ensuring that ideas are successfully transformed into clear action plans for the project. His focus on efficiency, complements and supports the relational strengths of the ENFJ members (Samarth and Vedant).

Deebhika (ENFP) adds creative energy and openness to new possibilities, often encouraging the team to explore alternative viewpoints, ideas before settling on a fixed decision or commitment. Shravani (INFJ) contributes thoughtful reflection and ethical awareness, ensuring that discussions remain grounded in purpose without being diverted from the main core of the discussion which would provide long-term impact.

This productive combination of strategic execution, emotional intelligence, creativity, and committed thinking aligns strongly with our project theme of conflict management and negotiation. Our team naturally projects different communication styles, decision-making approaches, and conflict management perspectives, allowing us to not only study team dynamics theoretically but also experience and navigate them in practice while having team discussions. Together, we represent a balanced ecosystem of personalities that strengthens both performance and mutual understanding to provide the best output and findings for our project.

ROLES AND RESPONSIBILITIES

To ensure clarity, accountability, and smooth execution of our project on building effective team dynamics through conflict management and negotiation skills, roles have been thoughtfully assigned based on individual strengths, personality traits, and preferred capabilities.

Samarth (ENFJ-T) – Project Leader

Samarth ensures overall coordination and communication within the team members. He is responsible for setting the context for discussions, ensuring that timelines are followed to, and maintaining consistent communication among all the team members. His role extends beyond just task monitoring, he actively works to ensure team harmony maintains, facilitate open meaningful discussions, and ensure that every team member's perspective is respected and acknowledged. By balancing structure with empathy, he ensures that progress and morale of the team stay on track simultaneously.

Saksham (ENTJ) – Project Management & Ensures Quality of Submissions

Saksham plays a central role in project management. He ensures that planning, execution, and deliverables remain aligned with the project objectives. His responsibilities include monitoring progress, identifying potential mistakes, maintaining timeline discipline, and ensuring that the overall structure of the project remains within the context. Acting as the operational anchor of the team, he makes sure that all components move forward efficiently and that the final output meets academic standards.

Vedant (ENFJ) – Interview Planning & Handles the Communication Part

Vedant took primary responsibility for designing the interview framework and preparing the discussion questionnaire for external participants. He structured the flow of questions to ensure they aligned with the project theme and allowed for meaningful, exploratory insights. In addition, he coordinates with team members, manages scheduling, and ensures professional interaction during discussions. His strong communication skills contribute significantly to extracting practical insights relevant to our project theme and context.

Deebhika (ENFP) – Research & Innovation Lead

Deebhika leads the exploration of secondary resources and conceptual inputs. She identifies relevant case studies, articles, and theoretical models that strengthen the academic depth of the project. Her ability to think creatively and consider alternative viewpoints helps the team examine conflict dynamics from multiple perspectives rather than approaching them rigidly. She also contributes innovative ideas during brainstorming sessions.

Shravani (INFJ) – Ethics & Documentation Lead

Shravani is responsible for maintaining documentation structure, citation accuracy, and ethical alignment throughout the project. She ensures that all references are properly acknowledged and that written submissions reflect clarity, coherence, and depth. Her reflective approach strengthens the analytical quality of the project and ensures that discussions remain aligned with the intended scope and values of the assignment.

Together, these clearly defined roles minimize overlap, enhance efficiency, and ensure that each member contributes in areas where they are naturally inclined to perform at their best.

This structured distribution of responsibilities supports both individual accountability and collective success.
