

Strategies for Professional Growth

Team Contract

Leader Selection Rationale

Samarth (ENFJ-T) was selected as the team leader after a thoughtful discussion among members, considering both working styles as well personality strength. As an ENFJ-T (Protagonist) personality type, he displays a natural ability to bring people and his team members together, providing environment for open discussions, and make sure that every member feels heard and validated. Given that our team consists of members with diverse personality types, ranging from strategic thinkers to creative thinkers and brilliant reflective planners, we believed it was important to have a person like him as our leader, who values collaboration as much as execution.

Samarth's strength lies in maintaining and balancing structure with empathy. He is very comfortable taking initiative, coordinating timelines, and monitoring progress, while also being attentive to team morale and individual concerns raised by the members. His inclination toward active communication within the team helps us to prevent misunderstandings and keeps everyone aligned with shared goals.

Additionally, his ability to remain solution-focused during challenges ensures that conflicts are addressed respectfully and constructively rather than emotionally. As a Protagonist personality type, he is motivated not only by results but also by the growth and contribution of each team member. For these reasons, the team collectively agreed that he is well-fitted to lead the group toward both high productive outcome while also maintaining the team harmony.

Team Diversity

Our team demonstrates strong background on both cognitive and behavioural diversity, reflected through different personality types showcased by its members. Rather than forming a group where all members demonstrate similar personality types, we intentionally built a team around people where strengths complement one another.

Saksham (ENTJ – Commander) brings a strategic and execution-focused mindset. He always thinks in terms of structure, long-term planning, and measurable outcomes. His results driven approach makes sure that ideas are transformed into clear action plans and deadlines.

Samarth (ENFJ-T – Protagonist) and Vedant (ENFJ – Protagonist) contribute strong interpersonal and leadership capabilities. While both the members share the same ENFJ type, they demonstrate their strengths differently, Samarth focuses on coordination, alignment, and maintaining team harmony, whereas Vedant excels in communication, motivation, and external engagement. Their shared empathy strengthens collaboration, but their functional roles prevent redundancy.

Deebhika (ENFP – Campaigner) adds creative thinking, adaptability, and innovative thinking to the group. She often approaches challenges by asking “what if?” and exploring alternative possibilities and solutions. Her openness to new ideas prevents the team from becoming overly rigid or purely task-driven.

Shravani (INFJ – Advocate) provides depth, reflection, and strong ethical awareness. Her ability to analyse current situation and consider long-term impact ensures that our decisions remain aligned with values and within the scope of the project. She also strengthens the quality of documentation and thoughtful reasoning within the team.

Collectively, this diversity within members creates balance across multiple dimensions:

- Thinking (ENTJ) and Feeling (ENFJ, ENFP, INFJ) personality orientations ensure both logical analysis and sensitivity.
- Judging types (ENTJ, ENFJ, INFJ) contribute structure and planning, while the Perceiving trait (ENFP) enhances flexibility and adaptability.
- Extroverted members facilitate discussion and engagement, while reflective members add depth and careful consideration.

This blend of strategic execution, empathetic leadership, creative exploration, and ethical grounding strengthens both the quality of our decisions and the effectiveness of our collaboration. Rather than operating from a single perspective, we benefit from complementary approaches that enhance problem-solving, accountability, and team cohesion.

Role Allocation

To ensure accountability and effective collaboration, roles within the team have been assigned based on each member’s personality type and natural working style. Rather than distributing responsibilities randomly, we aligned tasks with individual strengths identified through self-personality assessment, enabling each member to contribute meaningfully and confidently.

Samarth (ENFJ-T) – Project Leader

As Project Leader, Samarth is responsible for overall coordination, maintaining flow of comm, relationships within the team and ensuring that deadlines are met. His strength lies in aligning team efforts toward shared goals while keeping the motivation high. He setups meetings, clears expectations, and ensures that responsibilities are understood and evenly distributed among all members.

Saksham (ENTJ) – Plans Strategies and Ensures the Quality

Saksham initiates structural planning and quality checks. His strategic mindset and focus on measurable outcomes make him well-suited for designing timelines and strategies for moving forward with the goal, monitoring progress, and ensuring that deliverables meet academic standards. He plays a key role in keeping the project goal-oriented and execution-driven.

Deebhika (ENFP) – Research & Innovation Lead

Deebhika leads idea generation and explores external available resources. Her curiosity and openness to new possibilities allow the team to explore from diverse perspectives and creative approaches. She contributes by identifying relevant case studies, articles, and innovative angles that strengthen the depth of our project.

Vedant (ENFJ) – Ensures Proper Communication and Collaboration

Vedant manages external interactions, including interview coordination and presentation delivery. His strong communication skills and ability to connect with people ensure that discussions with external participants are engaging and purposeful. He also supports the team in articulating ideas clearly during team meeting.

Shravani (INFJ) – Ensures Ethics & Documentation Structure

Shravani is responsible for ensuring citation compliance, maintaining documentation quality, and monitoring academic integrity. Her reflective and detail-oriented approach strengthens the depth of written submissions. She also ensures that the team's outputs remain aligned with ethical standards.

By aligning responsibilities with personality strengths, the team enhances both efficiency and accountability. This structured allocation reduces overlap, prevents confusion, and allows each member to operate in areas where they are naturally inclined to perform at their best.

Decision-Making Process

Our team believes that effective decision-making should balance responsibilities with efficiency. Given the diversity in our personality types and perspectives, we have established a structured yet flexible approach to ensure clarity and fairness while working on our project.

For major academic or strategic decisions, we prioritize agreement. This allows every member to express their viewpoint and ensures that final outcomes reflect collective agreement rather than individual preference. We value open discussion and encourage constructive disagreement, as it often leads to stronger and more well-rounded decisions.

However, in situations where full agreement cannot be reached within a reasonable timeframe, a majority vote will be adopted to prevent delays and to maintain the flow and momentum. This ensures progress while still respecting democratic participation.

In matters concerning ethics, academic integrity, or professional conduct, the team agrees that immediate discussion is necessary before proceeding. Such concerns will not be overridden by majority vote, as maintaining integrity remains a shared responsibility and priority.

For operational aspects such as deadlines, structural alignment, and workflow coordination, the final call will rest with the Project Leader (Samarth) in consultation with the Strategy & Quality Lead (Saksham). This ensures clarity in execution while maintaining accountability.

Overall, our decision-making framework is designed to be collaborative yet decisive, allowing the team to remain inclusive without compromising efficiency.

Communication Norms

To ensure smooth coordination, the team will primarily use WhatsApp for regular communication and Google Meet for collaborative meetings and planning. All members are expected to respond within a reasonable timeframe to avoid delays.

Drafted submissions must be shared at least 48 hours before the final deadline to allow sufficient time for review and revisions. We will conduct weekly structured check-ins to track progress, address challenges, and realign responsibilities if required. After every meeting, tasks will be clearly explained to ensure accountability and clarity of expectations and to make sure everyone's aware of their goals.

Conflict Resolution

As a team, we recognize that differences in opinions, working styles, and expectations are very natural in collaborative environments and when multiple people work for the same project. Rather than treating conflict negatively, we see it as an opportunity for clarification and growth when handled respectfully and carefully.

If a concern arises between members, the first step will be to address the issue privately and directly with the individual involved. This allows misunderstandings to be resolved early without escalating the matter unnecessarily without wasting time and affecting the team harmony. We believe that open and honest one-to-one conversations often prevent minor issues from becoming larger problems.

If the matter remains unresolved, it will be brought to the group for constructive discussion. During such discussions, members are expected to focus on specific behaviours or actions rather than personal traits, ensuring that feedback remains professional and solution-oriented rather than blaming. The objective will always be to find a fair resolution that supports both individual accountability and overall team harmony.

Escalation to the course instructor will only be considered only in cases of repeated violations, serious misconduct, or failure to adhere to agreed standards. This approach ensures that conflicts are handled internally and maturely, while still maintaining academic integrity and collective responsibility.

Accountability and Academic Integrity

As a team, we recognize that accountability is essential to both academic performance and professional growth. Each member is responsible not only for completing assigned tasks, but also for ensuring that their contributions meet agreed standards of quality and scope of the project goal.

All external sources used in the project will be properly cited to maintain transparency and academic honesty. Before final submission, the team will conduct internal plagiarism checks to ensure originality and avoid unintentional errors. This step is treated as a mandatory quality-control measure rather than a formality.

In addition, a peer review system will be implemented, where members cross-check sections prepared by others for clarity, coherence, and citation accuracy. This ensures collective responsibility rather than isolated work.

Workload will be distributed equally among the team members based on role allocation, with the freedom for adjustments if required. Every member remains accountable for both individual contributions and the overall outcome of the project.

Commitment Statement

As a team, we commit to working with professionalism, mutual respect, and a shared sense of responsibility throughout this project. We recognize that our collective success depends not only on individual effort, but also on accountability, trust and open communication.

We agree to uphold academic integrity in all aspects of our work, respect the diversity of perspectives and personality types within the team, and support one another in meeting our commitments. By signing this contract, each member affirms their intention to contribute honestly, responsibly, and in good faith toward achieving our shared objectives.
